

Superior Species

Chapter 1 - The Challenge

Scene I - Terra

High school was finally almost over. In less than a month, Terra would be done with all the cheerleaders and jocks and popular girls. She felt like throwing up every time one of them got too close to her. She deserved their respect, but high school politics hated anybody with a real brain.

She was ready to be over all of it. But there was one thing she still wanted to do before she left this school behind her for good. She wanted that damned gym teacher, Mrs. Teller, to tell her that the brain is the only muscle that really needs training. She wanted the English teacher, Mrs. Williams, to tell her that her original stories deserved to be published...

Okay, so she basically wanted to dominate all of her teachers and turn her perfect grades into proper praise for her perfection. Something she doubted any of the students would ever do, they wouldn't give her the time of day unless they were forced to by a teacher.

Another day of being the smartest loser Niemen Tech had ever seen. She ground the sole of her right shoe into the floor as she thought about how much she hated this school, then she heard something.

"Miss Kelly?" The voice was annoyingly familiar. Every morning in homeroom, she was the popular cat everybody else liked. She'd been voted the queen at both of the dances in their Senior year, not that Terra went to dances. It was Kadelya Shadow, the red-headed catgirl whose popularity was as effortless for her as was Terra being the punching bag of everybody else in the school. Still, she was the only popular girl who even pretended to care about Terra.

"Yeah, what is it class pres?" Terra didn't really care what she wanted. But she wasn't going to march away from the lunch line and starve like one of the hot bitches.

"The teachers told me this morning," Kadelya said, her voice too damn cheery to be honest. "You're going to be offered the valedictorian speech."

A popularity contest among the teachers. Oh sure, only the highest grades were eligible, but Terra was pretty sure Kadelya was the only student even close to her grades. "They picked the dweeb with perfect grades instead of the princess, huh? What's even the point?"

The line moved forward as one of the students finished getting their ID scanned for the meal. Kadelya didn't answer immediately, and Terra was sure she was just trying to find the best-smelling fish sticks on the line. Cats always thought they were the best.

"My GPA slipped," Kadelya said. "Three point nine eight. You have a perfect four."

Served her right. Terra smirked as she took another step forward. "I still don't get the point. Nobody cares what I have to say anyway."

"I know you hate speeches," Kadelya said. "And I know you can do it anyway. I've paid attention to all of your speeches in English class. But the crowd..."

Terra closed her eyes and took a deep breath. Was this fucking popular princess of the school trying to act like she was concerned about Terra again, the one time the school was going to give her a platform to tell everybody what she really thought?

"Stop talking," she said sharply. "You think I can't give this speech. You think I'm not good enough, and need you to make me feel confident or stronger or some bullshit, right, Shadow?"

"We're not friends, you know. I don't have friends here. I don't need friends. I beat you academically, and you're jealous of me. That's what this really is. You want to challenge me for the top spot now, right kitty?"

Kadelya took a deep breath. "No, I've always wanted..."

"Challenge accepted," Terra said firmly.

Scene II - Kadelya

Why did Miss Kelly have to be such a prickly person? Why was everything with her always about how much everybody except her sucked?

Kadelya shook her head gently as she paid for her own lunch, then headed out into the cafeteria. She did have other things on her metaphorical plat than making sure Miss Kelly wouldn't be an ass at graduation. But she still hated that after eight years in school together, she still hadn't been able to change Terra's opinion of her, or of anybody else, for the better.

She walked over to a table where the photography club members on lunch during this session were sitting. The photography club members and her girlfriend, one of their favorite subjects to shoot -- a fair-furred foxgirl with a brown mane that ran in light waves down her back. Her green eyes were shining as she talked with Kevin Redford, a weasel with brown and white fur that would have looked really good if he was dating Sophie, but he had a human girlfriend who wasn't on break this session. His mane was neat and matched the brown of his fur almost exactly, and his eyes were a dirty golden color. If he were single, or open, she might even encourage Sophie to ask him out. After all, they both had their boyfriends too.

Sophie lifted her tan-colored satchel off the seat next to her as Kadelya approached. "Hey there," she said as Kadelya pulled the seat out and set her lunch tray down. "I saved your seat, sexy."

Kadelya blushed a bit. Sophie wasn't the only one who would describe her that way, but it was still a little bit embarrassing in school. "You don't need to call me that all the time," she said, putting her bag on the floor. "So... you'll never guess who wound up getting valedictorian."

The table quieted down a bit at that. All eyes moving to her as she opened the plastic wrapper for her disposable service. Once everybody was quiet, a vole girl with gray fur that almost looked blue in the midday ambiance and blonde hair raised an eyebrow over her brilliant green eye, probably a colored lens. Kadelya tried to remember her name. "So, don't leave us hangin, fam."

"Miss Kelly," Kadelya said, keeping her voice down. She scooped up some of the rice on her plate, and took a bite, letting the photography club take it in. Their voices became low murmurs, until the vole looked straight at Kadelya and raised her hand, forefinger outstretched like that video game lawyer.

"The crazy bomber girl beat you out for top marks?" Emerald. Kadelya remembered her name, though she did prefer Emma. She seemed to be shook, and Kadelya wasn't surprised. Sophie was probably the only one who could have guessed it, especially since their dating was the main reason Kadelya's grades had actually slipped during this last semester. But Emma felt like she was about to yeet accusations, if not food, at the catgirl. "I find that hard to believe, class pres! You're always on top of everything!"

Kadelya shrugged. "I guess, but I already got my acceptance letter at Stamen, and I'm making plans for moving down to Frisco. I have an extra workload figuring out how that's all gonna work, especially if Mark's still up here."

Another student stood up. Kadelya tried to place them, but couldn't immediately recall anything except their pronouns. A wolverine, non-binary and wearing a binder under a slightly-too-tight white shirt. Ruddy brown fur and a slicked back, but still curly, red mane. Their paws nearly black, while their face was ringed with a color closer to cream around a deep brown mask on the top of their muzzle and around their eyes. Why couldn't she remember their name right now?

"Look, I don't care that it wasn't you," they said with a growl. "But Kelly doesn't deserve it on anything but marks, right? Nobody likes her. She doesn't like anybody. I mean, I don't think think she's a crazy bomber or a shooter type, but everybody knows she's antisocial."

Sophie somehow slammed her water bottle on the table just hard enough to get everybody's attention, but not to draw it from other tables. "Hold up Ford," she said as the table quieted. "Valedictorian is only about marks. If Kelly got the marks for it, it's not really our place to protest the school's decision, is it?"

Ford shook their head slowly. "It still isn't fair. Especially since everybody loves Kadelya. I know I don't graduate this year, but all three years of students respect her, Sophie. Terra is someone most of us just avoid because when we tried to be nice, she pushed us away.” The junior made their point and sat back down, grumbling.

“Okay, but...” Kadelya took a bite of her cod fillet, then held up a finger, chewing it slowly, deliberately. She swallowed and continued. “This is my last chance to try and get through to her. There’s good in her somewhere, and I really want the chance to show everybody that bit of good I see in her since she got this honor, okay?”

Sophie was beaming. Emma was still staring, but her hands were both on the table now. Ford let out a heavy sigh. The rest of the table were quiet for a moment as Kadelya, and others, ate their lunches.

The silence wasn’t broken until the club president, a dappled skink, swallowed the last bite of his cod fillets. He had been quiet until now, taking in everything with the patience a nature photographer, or a sniper, needed for the perfect shot. Gregory Milton let his tongue flick out and nodded. “That’s why we all love Kadelya, isn’t it? She might be crazier than Pollyanna, but her hope is contagious.” The wasn’t even a hint of sarcasm in his voice. “If Kadelya can’t get the creep out of Terra, nobody can.”

As she continued to chew on her own lunch, Kadelya felt the warm blush she always did when other people praised her. It wasn’t why she looked for the good in everybody, and getting praised made her self conscious. But as the rest of the table started to acquiesce to the fact that she wasn’t upset, she started to believe that maybe she could get Terra to see the good in at least one other person.

Chapter 2: Challenge Accepted

Scene I - Terra

“Challenge accepted.”

Terra glared at the class president, stepping forward to pay for her lunch. “You think I can’t give a stupid speech. I’ll show you I’m completely capable of delivering it. Meet me in the atrium after school.” Her voice was not loud, but it was firm.

Kady let out a heavy sigh, but nodded. “Fine. I just want to see your best.”

Terra bristled at that, but she said nothing else. She turned and walked out of the lunch line, then headed out past the cafeteria to the spot near the library where she always ate. After her food was done, she’d usually go into the library, read up on her personal interests, and often check out a book.

Everybody always thought she needed help. Just because she wasn’t some social butterfly, it didn’t mean she didn’t understand people. In fact, she thought to herself, chewing on her carrot sticks, she understood them all too fucking well. She could probably teach Miss Prom Queen Class President that grades didn't matter, only applied knowledge meant anything.

She could feel the corner of her mouth curling up in a grin. She knew psychology better than anybody in the school. And even if she didn't have any of her own inventions on hand, or tested, she could use her own knowledge all the time.

Scene II - Terra

Terra was ready. As most of the teens were heading home or to a room for their clubs, she stood by the broad window of the atrium, directly across from the main entrance. She knew enough about Kadelya that she was confident her prey wouldn't pussy out, she was a goody two-shoes like that.

But a small part of her was still surprised to see the catgirl with her fox girlfriend, approaching Terra. Before she could hear them over the rush of other students, she saw Kadelya lick the foxgirl's cheek and then part ways with her, the fox carrying two bookbags, and Kady only bringing a water bottle with her. Terra tried to remember who the foxgirl was. Brown? She wasn't important. Kadelya was the one who had challenged her.

As Kadelya got close, Terra offered her hand for a handshake. She took a deep breath as her rival responded in kind. She had to be quick, especially with the crowd. As their hands clasped, Terra gave a sudden tug and wrapped her free arm around the catgirl. "Sleep. Quiet. Obey. Follow me, Shadow. Follow me to the lecture hall, silent as can be."

She felt the cat's body go limp for a second, felt the shock, but she had apparently done it right. After a brief tense shock, Kadelya was staring a bit blankly, and nodded at Terra. She didn't say a word.

"Right. Third floor, north wing," Terra said, letting go of Kadelya. "Nod if you understand." She slowly let go of Kadelya's hand, watching for the response.

Kadelya nodded.

Scene III - Kadelya

Three classes after lunch, and Kadelya was ready to meet up with Terra. All she had left was to meet her girlfriend, head to the atrium, and then see Sophie off before she met with the mousegirl. Sophie was a few rooms down the hall, so Kadelya headed to the nearest drinking fountain to wait for her.

While she did, she sent a text to her mom, letting her know why she would be home late this afternoon, and then another to her uncle Kharm. No need to have them worrying. A lock of her light red hair fell across her muzzle as she swiped the second message in.

She was vaguely aware as Sophie stepped up to the fountain and started filling her water bottle from it. "My, my, such a thirsty girl you are, love."

Sophie giggled at that, but finished filling her bottle. "Well you're all the sugar I need, kitty," she said, screwing the top onto her bottle. After slipping the bottle into her satchel, she intertwined her left arm with Kadelya's right, and gave her a quick kiss on the cheek. "So you're really going to meet up with her?"

Kadelya reached her left hand up and smoothed the loose lock back where it belonged, her right hand gripping Sophie's. They started to walk, and Kadelya nodded. "I know I'm not a therapist, I'm not like Miss Sarah or Doctor Miller. But I want to try to at least let her see that somebody here cares enough to see her do better."

Sophie let out a low sigh, and Kadelya knew she was upset. Not angry, but upset. "You're my light, Sophie. If it weren't for how much you've convinced me that we can work to make everyone happy, I wouldn't try with her." She shouldered open the fire door to Sophie wouldn't need to, and they emerged into the central area of the building, nearing the atrium. "Could you do a huge favor for me, love?"

"Your bag?" Sophie giggled and squeezed Kadelya's hand. "I love you looking for the good in everybody. I want to see the good in her that you do, but I've been here six years, we've been dating for four, and nobody ever gets close to Terra, love."

"Well, it's not too late to try again," Kadelya said, leaning over and licking the fox-girl's cheek. "You know where I am. I texted mom and uncle Kharm. If I'm not home before dark, you all know what to do."

Sophie blushed and nodded. She let go of Kadelya's hand, then waited patiently for Kadelya to get her own water bottle out and pass her satchel over. "Love you, kitty."

"Love you too, foxy," Kadelya said, all but skipping off towards Terra. As she got close, Terra reached her hand out for a handshake. Kadelya stopped and reached her hand out too.

And then her head was swimming. She felt confused, then tired and calm and focused. "Sleep. Quiet. Obey. Follow me, Shadow. Follow me to the lecture hall, silent as can be." She knew she was in a trance. Hypnotized in front of dozens of other students who were probably too focused on going home or to club rooms to notice that she was suggestible.

The only student who noticed was the one who put her here in this state. The one who was still hugging her, holding her up. Gently, she was pushed into a standing posture again. "Right. Third floor, north wing," Terra said, letting go of Kadelya. "Nod if you understand."

Kadelya nodded slowly, and followed Terra. Terra had some sort of hypnotic patter going, something Kadelya could focus on, but not quite remember what she said. Keeping her relaxed after the surprising rapid induction, but not quite trying to deepen the trance yet. Kadelya was curious where this would go.

Scene IV - Terra

The third floor north lecture hall was Terra's favorite. Unlike the others, it had only one door, and no windows. The lock on the door had been broken for a few months, but the room was used so rarely that nobody had gotten around to fixing it. And since it swung inward, she could just move the lecturer's desk up against the door to lock it.

She had been careful to stay near Kadelya the whole way here. Speaking softly and keeping the rudimentary trance state focused. Now, she was ready to work. "Now, you're going to listen to everything I say, you're going to help me prepare my speech, do you understand?"

Kadelya nodded slowly, and Terra felt a rush of excitement.

"You are so attentive, taking notes on everything I say, that it's easy to remember everything and save your questions for the end of my speech. Until I finish, you only speak when I ask you a question. In fact, you only speak, if I tell you to answer, do you understand?"

Another slow nod from the catgirl.

"Since I'm the valedictorian, I'm standing for my speech, but as my audience, you should make yourself comfortable, sitting in any chair you like, or on the floor." Terra nervously bit her lower lip. She'd never done this offline before, and even online she always used text chat. "When you're comfortable, you... you start purring. So I know how comfortable you are."

She wasn't entirely sure if Kadelya could purr, but she was a cat, right? Why wouldn't she purr if she was comfortable. Kadelya looked groggily around the room, her tail swishing behind her as she looked over the seating. After about half a minute, she squatted down and sat herself on the floor, her legs tight together, bent fully at the knees, slightly to one side, with her long feline feet stretching out straight from the ankles.

"Good girl," Terra said licking her lips softly. "You're here to listen to my speech with full attention, right? Answer."

Kadelya looked up at her and nodded slowly. "Yes, I want to help you, Miss Kelly."

"Call me Terra," Terra said. "When we're alone like this, I'd like if you call me Terra."

Kadelya paused and looked at her. "As you wish, Terra. I didn't think--"

"You can leave the thinking to me," Terra said suddenly. "I mean, you only need to think about my speech. Calm, focused on my voice and words for the speech."

After Kadelya gave another nod, Terra started her speech. It was a guided meditation induction, and she watched Kadelya for her responses. Her eyes started to flutter, her breathing grew deep and calm, her purring even seemed to get louder. It took about ten minutes until Terra was comfortable that it had worked well.

"Kadelya, you are now in a deep trance, but I can take you deeper. It will make it easier to focus on me, easier to remember what I'm saying deep down, even though your surface mind might forget the details, your deep hypnotized mind remembers my words perfectly... You want to go deeper, you want to let your surface mind forget so you can remember better in your hypnotized mind."

Scene V - Kadelya

Kadelya blinked several times. She already knew she was in a decent trance. She was comfortable. But Terra hadn't actually asked her if this was okay. She reached out in her mind, and gave the slightest tug on a suggestion she knew she'd given herself. It was easy to go along with the trance, and Terra hadn't done anything too bad yet. But it could get bad if she didn't do something right now.

She knew that she was very suggestible. It was already feeling very easy to focus on Terra. Like she would forget that was happening if she kept listening longer. It felt so very 'very' tempting to give in to the idea of forgetting and accepting. But she needed to be smart and safe. She needed to choose this for herself.

"Caffeine." Her eyes fluttered softly, and she felt herself become less focused, more aware.

Terra's eyes were getting narrower. She seemed surprised, taken aback, maybe not quite shocked, but definitely upset. "What the heck? What are you doing?"

"I'm going to talk to you, Terra." Kadelya smiled toothless smile, looking up at the mousegirl in front of her. "The first thing I want to tell you is that I'm having fun. I never would have thought you were into this sort of thing, but I enjoy hypnosis too."

Terra nodded slowly. She didn't seem to have expected this reaction and seemed to be trying to keep her guard up, as if Kadelya might turn the tables and try to force her own rizz on the mouse. It was kind of cute, and if she had permission, Kadelya wouldn't hesitate. After a moment of concerned silence, Terra sat on the teacher's desk. "What are you planning, Shadow?"

"I plan to let you drop me again," Kadelya said, feeling her smile grow. "I'll let you try whatever you like... But I have three conditions."

Terra squirmed a bit on the desk, her maryjane shoe pressing hard against the floor. “What is this, some sort of genie wish bullshit?”

Kady raised a hand to her face and brushed a few stray strands of hair out of the way. “No, I’m not giving you three wishes. Just the three rules. Rule one, my safe word is caffeine. I do not drink or consume caffeine, so if I say or write the word, or if I signal with three taps, that means we stop. Is that acceptable and clearly understood?”

Terra looked away from Kadelya for a moment. At the whiteboard, the back of the lecture hall, the door she’d placed the desk against. Then she nodded. “Fine. I guess you’re smarter than I expected, so I’ll resting your hecking safe word. What else?”

Kadelya felt her tail swishing. “I’m agreeing to play with you, and you’re choosing to play with me. There is no passthrough. You might already be thinking about how I know enough about hypnotism to wake myself up, who else do I play with? That’s my concern, not yours, even if you want to be my Mistress. Not that I’m committing to that level yet.”

Terra’s eyes moved like she was reading something. Of course, Kadelya had no reason to expect Terra had anybody for her to get at -- but she knew that if she didn’t lay out the no passthrough rule, Sophie would be at risk. Not just Sophie, Mark too. She had a responsibility to keep her partners safe. Terra didn’t have to worry about that, she guessed. After all, if she did, she might have softened up a bit over the years.

“Oh, you think you hold all the cards here,” Terra said, growling between and through the words. Her teeth chattered a bit at the end, too. “Fine, you’re the only one I want to mess with anyway. Everybody else leaves me alone like I want, and I leave them alone. What’s the third rule?”

All three rules were equally important, but the first was slightly more so than the other two. As much as Kadelya was into the hypnokink, as much as her own girlfriend was a nympho, if even Sophie had agreed to this rule, then she was sure Terra could do the same.

“The third rule is propriety. No sex at school. Not that I have a problem with sex, but... it would be a shame if the two smartest girls in school got expelled before graduation for being inappropriate in public. And then mommy and daddy might not let me visit you if we got caught. Those three rules and... I’ll let you experiment on me. However you want within those rules.”

Scene VI - Terra

Terra wanted to step on this insolent’s cat’s head and ruin her perfectly done fiery mane. She wanted to pull up a hypno flasher on her phone and force the brat to stare into gooning trainers. She wanted to do exactly what the cat had just told her was the third limit on this and try to fuck her right here and now.

But that would be counterproductive.

“However I want,” she said flatly. “No limits except those?”

Kadelya nodded as her eyes fluttered briefly, but she stayed awake as far as Terra could tell.

“Fine. Then I have three rules too. I don’t care if accept them now, since you agreed I can do anything, but I expect you to follow them without me fucking your brain into obeying them,” she said her mind taking up the task.

“Rule one: Terra is your Mistress and Terra is your only Mistress. Nobody else is allowed to dom you unless I say so. Nod!”

Kadelya nodded. Maybe too quickly, but that was fine.

“Rule two: Terra doesn’t let her toys cum without permission.” She all but spat the words out at Kadelya, trying to test how true it was that the catgirl with the perfect creamy blonde fur and fiery red mane wasn’t going to put up any more limits. “You can edge and goon all you like, in fact I’ll make you do it more than you’d like because you do it for me, but if you cum without permission, especially with some other lover, I’m going to make your back and ass redder than your ‘I’m-so-cute’ blushing cheeks.”

Kadelya looked down with a little disappointment, even when she looked back up her eyes showed hints of disappointment at this restriction..

Terra leaned down and put her muzzle by the cat’s left ear, and commanded, “Nod.”

Kadelya nodded, slowly, but she did it. Terra wanted her suffering a bit right now, for thinking she had the right to dictate terms to the mouse.

“Good girl. Now, you clearly know something about hypnosis, so rule three is nobody hypnotizes you except me from now on. And you’re going to tell me everything you know to let me use your own practice for my sake.”

Kadelya was purring as she nodded this time. Did the catgirl really want this that badly? Well, that would just make it all the more fun for Terra to break down all three of the rules the needy pussy kneeling before her had set down. After all, it wasn’t a subby pussy cat’s place to dictate rules to her owner, and before graduation, Terra would own her, and just to prove that she owned Kadelya, she’d own the fix her slave was dating, and possibly already hypnotizing, too.

She hoped the vixen was already being hypnotized. That would make her plan even easier.

Scene VII - Terra

Kadelya had explained her experience. She'd been sneaking dirty books out of her dad's library for a few years. She'd fallen into the hypnokink from that, and downloaded hypnosis files with triggers and trainers and curses for a little over two years, and had just told Terra all of the triggers she had. Terra had written furiously in a notebook for much of the time. She was sure that Kady felt a bit embarrassed, and knew the catgirl was blushing (maybe she was too), but Kady confided that there was a strange relief in sharing this with someone other than her submissive partners. Someone who might take advantage of her for their pleasure instead of her own.

"Alright," Terra said taking a sharp breath in after the word. "Hypno sleep. Hypno sleep. Hypno sleep!" Each repetition of the trigger punctuated by a snap of her fingers, she watched kadelya for the response.

Kadelya might have laughed at the idea of the trigger being used like it was a demon summoning chant, except that her eyes dilated at the first snap and she was in no position to laugh as the second and third dragged her down into a psychological free fall. Terra repeated the trigger and snap combination a few more times, and then...

Terra was silent, not that silence mattered to Kadelya right now. Only Terra's voice mattered. "Very good. Now I want you to start counting down, out loud, as I speak to you. Start at 100, and keep counting until I say 'drop.' With every odd number, feel your surface mind pulling you awake, but with every even number, your hypnotized mind draws you twice as deep, or more, than you surface mind can wake you. Do you understand? Answer."

"Yes, Terra," Kadelya answered her ears twitching as she processed the instruction.

Terra let herself actually smile at that. "Good girl, Kadelya. Start counting now." Terra let Kadelya start her count, then moved on to her deepener. She didn't really need to say anything special, since Kadelya's counting was the real deepener, but she worked to clear thoughts and resistance, to make Kadelya more willing to accept Terra's words as good ideas, as things Kadelya wanted to do. "Once you get to zero, you find that all of my ideas are good. My ideas are things you've always wanted to do."

It took a while, because the deeper Kadelya got, the slower the counting became. The time didn't matter, though. The challenge of making Kadelya respect her completely, unquestioningly, was the point. Soon, soon Kadelya would be deep enough for Terra to do whatever she wanted.

"Zero."

"Drop!" Terra snapped and grinned. "That's a good girl. I'm inside your mind now. My words are your mind. You always do what I say, because from now on, whether you're in your hypnotized mind or your surface mind, my words are exactly what you're thinking. Even if you think you thought something else, once I tell you what you are thinking, once I tell you what you want, or what you're doing, your hypnotized mind knows I'm right, and erases anything against my words from your surface mind."

Kadelya stared and nodded. And drooled a little bit, over the plush downy fur of her chin.

“Does that make you feel hot, Class Pres? Answer.”

Kadelya just stared through still-fluttering eyelids. “I don’t know,” she finally said, her words slurred.

“It makes you hot and wet,” Terra said firmly. “Does that make you feel hot, Class Pres? Answer.”

She saw the gears in Kadelya’s head turning and working to obey her. Seconds passed. The catgirl was breathing heavier, her hips squirming a bit before she spoke. “Yes, it makes me hot...”

“Good girl. Whenever I call you that, it makes you twice as hot, and makes your hypnotized mind stronger, making you obey me more easily.” This was only the start, of course. But the groundwork for her project was important. “Your hypnotized mind knows that you always obey me. What does such a good girl call someone she always obeys?”

Kadelya’s mind struggled for a moment, but it seemed to find an answer soon. “Mistress?”

“And you always obey me, so what does that make me?” Terra grinned and stepped in closer to Kadelya.

“Mistress,” Kady said, purring the word out. “You are my mistress.”

Terra reached down and cupped Kadelya’s chin on her hand, gently guiding her to look up. “That’s right, Kadelya. Feel your eyes open fully so you can admire your mistress, and know that this face is the most powerful, controlling face in the world. You give me anything I wish, as soon as you possibly can. Tell me who I am. Tell me what you do for me.”

Kadelya’s eyes slowly fluttered open, and the expression of submission that started to fill her face made Terra almost lose her own composure, but she had to hold on. “You are my mistress,” Kadelya said, gasping as she looked at Terra’s face from her kneeling position. “I do everything you want, mistress. I give you anything you wish, as quickly as I can.”

Terra wasn’t finished with Kadelya, but this was a good start...

“From now on, your hypnotized brain always obeys me. What do you call someone who always obeys a mistress? Answer.”

Kadelya paused, as if her mind were seeking the word, but it wasn’t long before she gave the right answer. “A slave, mistress. I am your slave.”

Chapter 3: Adoration

Scene I - Kadelya

"A slave, mistress. I am your slave." Kadelya felt nothing but truth and heat as she answered.

"That's right," Mistress said to her. "You are my slave. And your hypnotized mind always reminds you that you are my slave, and I am your mistress." Mistress paused for a moment and locked her eyes on Kadelya's. "And every time you remember that, it makes you feel hot and horny."

Kadelya nodded. Mistress had already taught her not to speak without a command. She felt a deep pleasure and heat fill her as she looked up at her mistress, every second seeming to remind her more and more that she was a slave and this mousegirl standing above her was her mistress. Mistress had a name... Terra. Mistress Terra had shown Kadelya that this mouse was the Mistress of the kneeling catgirl. She felt her hips squirm, it was so hot to be a slave, to be with her mistress.

Mistress let go of her chin. "Slaves look at the floor when they have no job," she said. "Look at the floor, at my feet. They're just as much above you as my face."

Kadelya nodded slowly, her mind turning over these simple facts. She took a deep breath, as if to speak, but she'd not been told to speak. She lowered her face and stared at Terra's sneakers. They were only uniform maryjanes, but they seemed powerful now that mistress had told her that the feet in those shoes were better than her, since they were mistress's feet.

Mistress was quiet for a while. The next thing Kadelya heard was, "Oh fuck! Shit! Kadelya, wake up. I'm going to count from three to one, and when I reach one, you wake up, your surface mind ignoring everything I've said, but your hypnotized mind still obeying everything I've told you. Answer."

"I understand, mistress," Kadelya said, feeling her calm, quiet mind starting to wake up already.

"Three, two, one." Kadelya heard a sharp snapping sound, then, "And wide awake for me now. Three two one, wide awake."

Kadelya's mind was rushing. She looked around the room. Terra was standing by the lecturer's desk, pulling at it. "Uh, what happened? I... I don't remember much of what we did, miss..." Kady paused as she thought about what she'd had almost said, but tried to catch her mistake. "Kelly? Terra?"

"I lost track of time, the school building is closing in fifteen minutes, slave."

Kadelya took a breath and tried to protest being called a slave. She wasn't a slave, slavery was illegal... except even as she tried to think about how to protest, she kind of liked Terra calling her a slave. She also vaguely remembered agreeing to let Terra hypnotize her, or something like that. She pushed herself up and headed over to Terra. "Sorry, let me help you, miss... Terra?" She did it again. She didn't have time to dwell on it.

"Yes, help me get this desk back, slave," Terra said, apparently unconcerned with filtering herself. "You are my slave, right?"

Kadelya's brain almost short circuited. "Uh, slave? I--"

"Just move the desk. Get that end." Terra was struggling, she must be really worked up. Kadelya helped from the opposite end of the desk, and they were able to get it back to where it was meant to be.

"Fucking hell," Terra said, breathing heavily. "Sorry. I panicked when I saw the time. I... oh wow, that went really well, didn't it? I lost track of the time..."

Kadelya nodded. "I'm sorry, I don't remember much of it. I didn't feel that tired... but you hypnotized me, right?"

"Yeah, and it's fine," Terra said, eyeing Kadelya. "Gawd, we have like ten minutes. Come on, get your things and let's get out before they lock the doors."

"Yes miss... Terra." Kadelya squashed the impulse again, but why did she keep feeling it?

"Good girl," Terra said picking up her backpack, and sliding her metal water flask into the side pocket.

Kadelya blushed as she felt a wave of arousal fill her from near her tummy. "I, uh... are you flirting with me, m... Terra?"

Terra's eyes went wide, and she stared at Kadelya. "I, uh, I don't flirt, slave. I own you, don't I?"

Kadelya paused. It was incredibly blunt to say that so plainly. But before she could think to stop herself, her mouth blurted out, "I... I am your slave, mistress." She raised her hands to muzzle herself.

"Yeah, that's what I thought, slave. But... what if I were flirting with you?" Terra opened the door to the lecture room. "You first, cat-slave."

Kadelya let go of her mouth to pick up her bag, slipping the messenger-style bag over her shoulder. "I have a girlfriend, mistress." She said it again. It felt right, somehow. "But, we're not in a closed relationship. I think I would enjoy if my mistress flirted with her cat-slave, if it pleased you too mistress."

Terra followed Kadelya out of the classroom and breathed a bit heavily for a moment as they headed downstairs. "Would you give your girlfriend to me too?"

Kadelya took a deep breath. “No, I wouldn’t, mistress. That’s a hard limit if I agreed to play with you. Besides, do you even know her name, mistress?”

Kadelya was confused by how certain she was that she actually was Terra’s slave, and Terra was her mistress. But she was certain of it, and even after finishing her salmon dinner, it was hard for her to not connect the word ‘mistress’ with the image of Terra. There was a condescending smirk or smile in that mental image that really drove it home, though she wasn’t sure if she’d actually seen that, or just dreamed it.

A message popped up on her phone.

<Is this Kadelya Shadow?> It wasn’t a number Kadelya knew, but it wasn’t obviously a spam message. Another message appeared. <Sorry. This is Terra Kelly.>

Kadelya’s heart fluttered a bit. She typed in a response. <Can you prove it?>

The next messages came in like burst fire in a shoter. <You haven’t even said if you are Kadelya.>

<Fuck it.>

<calling, pick up.>

Kadelya looked at the messages. Of course it could be anybody, but to ask for her by name and claim to be mistress Terra... she counted the seconds. Three. Four.

The ringtone of her phone went off. The same number as the text. Should she answer it? A few seconds went by, but she had to know. “Kadelya speaking,” she said softly.

“Fuck, thank goodness, I was worried because we didn’t exchange numbers at school.” Terra’s voice was a little dry, creaky, but she seemed happy. “So, Class Pres, how does it feel to be a slave?”

This time, Kadelya smiled at the word ‘slave.’ It felt good from her Mistress. “I am your slave, mistress Terra. It’s kind of hot. But it’s new, right? I mean, back at lunch...”

“You’ve been my slave for years,” Terra said firmly. “I had you hiding it until today, so you could get close to Sophie Brown for me.”

Kadelya’s heart fluttered. She loved Sophie. She had been dating her for four years. She was pretty sure she really did love Sophie, that they had gotten together on their own. But she vaguely remembered that Mistress had enslaved her years ago. She couldn’t put a finger on how long ago, but it must have been before she asked Sophie out.

And now it all made sense. She was Mistress Terra’s slave. Sophie had an obvious crush on her. Mistress wanted her to get close to Sophie, so she could give mistress another slave.

Whatever she thought before, and she couldn't even remember what that had been she realized, didn't make as simple of sense as this. "I understand, mistress. Is it time for me to deliver her to you?"

"Soon," Terra said, taking an audible deep breath. "But first I need to finish deconditioning your cover, Class Pres." The way she said Class Pres made Kadelya squirm.

"Deconditioning?"

"Of course. I made you into a goody two-shoes social butterfly, Kady." Kadelya squirmed. It made her feel loved to have a nickname from her Mistress. "You've been in deep cover as Kadelya. You were my girlfriend and slave since were twelve, and I hypnotized you to obey me. Remember."

Of course. She'd fallen for Mistress when they were twelve because they both liked hypnosis stuff! Kadelya nodded, then remembered that this call was voice only. "You made me forget it all, mistress?"

"I had to," Terra said. "But when you told me I was valedictorian, I knew it was time to make my move, to take you back and get Sophie to join you as my slave. You'll do whatever I command you to, Kady. You're my perfect slave, and you'll help me make Sophie a perfect slave too. I'm going to text you an address, tomorrow you are going to meet me there alone after school."

Okay, so she'd been Mistress Terra's secret agent. But there was a part of her that felt really bad about the idea of giving Sophie to Mistress. Sophie was hers, her girlfriend, her lover, and her slave. She couldn't betray Sophie. Was her cover that deep, so strong that it could fight doing what her Mistress wanted? Or would she love Sophie even more when they were both enslaved by Mistress? "Yes, I can do that, mistress," Kadelya said. "I'm... I'm still undercover, aren't I?"

"You are, and you need to maintain it in public," Terra said. "But when you meet me tomorrow, I'll let you break your cover when we're alone, because you are such a very good girl for me. Remember, you can't tell anybody that I'm your mistress until I say you can. And soon, you'll bring me your girlfriend Sophie, so she can be as happy to be my slave as you are."

The call ended with a very abrupt, "Good night, slave." And Kady was left with her thoughts. Confusing thoughts about being Terra's good little hypnotized cat-slave, thoughts of all the time she'd been forced to hide that even from herself, thoughts of the time she'd spent with Sophie instead of Mistress. The casual dates, the romantic dates, the Valentine's days. All the time that Mistress Terra had pretended to not care about her slave, her toy, so that Kadelya could become Class Pres and win over the most secretly freaky popular girl in school.

Because right now, Kadelya knew things about Sophie that Mistress didn't know.

She knew that Sophie was a naturist. That's why she always looked uncomfortable at school, she didn't like the uniforms.

She knew that Sophie loved hypnosis just as much as Kadelya did, and was a very good subject. In fact, she might be an even better subject than weak-minded switchy sub Kadelya, who had dominant urges in her. Sophie only wanted to serve.

She knew how much Sophie wanted to make other people feel good. She knew that Sophie would happily be anybody's slave... but Kadelya felt resistance in her heart still. Was it her dominant side, trying to hold on to ownership of the girl she'd been hypnotizing for most of the last four years? Was it misplaced love that was owed to Mistress before anybody else? Was it just the comfort on knowing that she could make Sophie melt, physically and mentally, better than her Mistress?

Kadelya decided that what she needed right now was a bath.

Scene II - Terra

Terra was lying her ass off, but those lies had to make a story that Kadelya believed easily enough to replace the truth. She had her IDE open and was writing suggestions, commands, stories, lies to tell her new slave to try and break her to the point that the "rules" she'd tried to make Terra accept were something the new, brainwashed 'true' version of her cat-slave would never have thought up or wanted to apply.

Terra didn't like when other people gave her rules. Run a mile in gym class? Fuck off, Miss Teller. She didn't need to run, she had a scooter if she needed to get anywhere the busses didn't go. Put more comments in your code? Fuck off Mr. Gardner. Stop telling your teachers to fuck off? Fuck off Principal Reyes.

She didn't need their rules, and as soon as she graduated, she was going to teach them all their proper place. Shadow was her final experiment, and Brown would be her masterpiece before she started taking over everybody who had tried to make her obey pointless arbitrary rules.

And to make that happen, she had three things left to test.

First, the bracelets. Innocuous devices she could carry around and apply at will. Nothing suspicious, and she'd just need to make sure she returns after an hour or so. She hadn't figured out how to speed them up any more.

Second, the neuralyzer. An electromagnetic coil that would instantly disrupt brainwaves inside of it. After a second or two, it could be turned off and leave the brain malleable like a very deep hypnotic induction. In theory, because she couldn't test it on herself. Or at least, she had, and had literally no recollection of the hour she'd been out, except that nothing had happened except for her blacking out while her breathing slowed and her body didn't move. She'd improved the insulation on it since that test, but she was pretty sure her brain would fight her own suggestions as much as it did anybody else's rules.

Third, proving that she could break someone as much as the porn manga and hentai and mcstories she spent all her time building ideas from. Figuring out how to shatter someone so much their mind was like putty to her voice all the time, until they'd never know the difference between real life and whatever she told them.

The last was what she wanted from Kadelya. But she'd happily test the other two on her in the process. Fuck, she needed to work out this plan.

So, she looked over her plot file. She said Kadelya had been hers for years. How many? When they were twelve, so about 6 years. She noted it into the storyline. She'd said the real Kadelya, the sociable one, was something she made to get close to Brown, to Sophie. She had to remember that name, even if she wasn't going to let on that she'd already fucked with Kadelya's memory to get information like that. It was testing, though, and as far as she knew, it had worked.

What else? Kadelya was presumptuous enough to try and give her rules. That meant she had to put her in her place for that. She was going to lose any charms she might have had before except for looks, Terra didn't want anybody else trying to steal her pussycat toy. She should give the cat a few hypnotically programmed alterations to make her more personalized. Thick glasses. A lisp. No, not just a lisp, a full-blown speech pathology for this adorkable cat. Gunpla obsession.

Personality type... Tsundere? No, she didn't want any lip from the cat. M-dere? No, she'd make Sophie into an M-dere. Maybe she could make Kadelya S-dere towards the fox. That could be fun, but not right for her attitude to Terra. Hajidere or kijidere... the former would be a good blushy slave who would never turn her down. Or the cool sociable mask that would echo her original self? She didn't have to choose now, she guessed, but building up a proper personality would take time and planning... but she should definitely start on the affectionate side. And maybe she'd put just a bit of a humiliation fetish in anyway... a reminder that as good as it was to be a slave, it was embarrassing too. After all, a good dork pussy doll deserved to feel at least as ashamed of what she was as she did proud of serving her owner.

Terra realized that she was getting worked up as she made her notes, and decided that maybe it was time to enjoy herself for a bit. Saving her notes, she pulled up some doujinshi and started to take care of herself for the night.

Scene III - Kadelya

Kadelya took a deep breath as she approached the old garage. It was in one of the denser neighborhoods of Alabaster, and the houses were more run-down than they were by the coast. She double checked the address that her mistress had texted here, and it was the right house, the garage matched the picture. Her heart was almost dancing in her chest as she walked up the driveway and stopped at the garage. There was a raising door for a car, but on the left there was also a regular door, and it has a bright yellow and black sign reading "Private Property," with a black and white sign under it, "No Trespassing."

She knocked at the door. There was a clatter from inside, followed by a stream of expletives muffled by the door. It took a moment for the blinds on the side of the door to get pulled back, and then for the door to open.

"Welcome home, slave," Terra said softly. "I know it's been a long time since you were here, so I'll show you around."

Kadelya found herself dragged inside, with the door hastily slammed, and locked, behind her. The garage had apparently been converted into an apartment, with drywall and a ladder leading up to the loft, where mistress probably kept her computer and bed. The floor was linoleum, and looked a bit damaged, as if it had been moved into the garage whenever mistress Terra had made it an apartment.

"Oooh, still in your uniform. No, that won't do for my slave. Blazer off at home, Kady. Shoes off, too. Obey."

Kady didn't hesitate, unbuttoning her blazer and slipping it off, then stepping out of her own shoes. "Like this, mistress?"

"Good girl," Terra said. "I don't really do guests much, but I have a lot of fun toys I've been working on here ever since I put you undercover. Text your family, tell them you're spending the night with me."

Kadelya didn't think, she just grabbed her phone and write a text to her dad. <Terra asked me to stay the night, love you dad.> As soon as she hit send, she saw Terra holding out a hand. She gave her mistress the phone.

"You won't be seeing anybody except me for the night, slave. Let's restore my nerdy girlfriend and integrate her with the agent who's been seducing Sophie for me."
